INSTRUCTIONS TO INSPECTORS

Inspectors should be more particularly influenced by the general appearance of a flock as to true character; it being essential that the sheep are pure-bred and show the true characteristics of pure-bred sheep.

Good constitution must also be apparent and freedom from extremely weak bone.

Carcase should be a first consideration.

The definition of a pure-bred sheep should be of great assistance to inspectors; but it would be impossible to find all the points therein described perfect in any flock, and it must be left to the discretion of an Inspector to exercise common sense in connection with the definition. A number of the minor points such as ears, nose, etc. should not influence Inspectors too much.

Excessively dark faced sheep should be discarded.

A sheep carrying an excessively coarse or hairy fleece should be condemned. The Inspectors should throw out sheep having a weak back covering or defective jaws.

It is essential that sheep should stand well on their legs, and if they are deformed, and the Inspector does not consider the defect caused by accident, but hereditary, they should be thrown out. Large black spots on face and legs should not be encouraged, and if in the wool, the sheep should be condemned.

A bad droop behind the shoulders or hunchback, if very noticeable after a fair growth of wool, should condemn any sheep.

Allowance should be made for sheep in low condition, as the inspection is not for show purposes, but to provide that sheep entered in the Flock Book are suitable for breeding requirements.

Inspectors are particularly requested to make due allowance for age.

SYSTEM OF EAR TAGGING SHEEP

This is perhaps the most widely used; and is fairly easy to put in practice. The tags are reasonably cheap and the punch for making the hole in the ear, and the pincers for closing the tag, are equally so. Care should be taken to put tags near the butt of the ear.

Advantages: Member's prefix, year date and lamb's number can be put on the tags and these are easily read by the buyer. Also a sire mark can be put on the edge of the ear.

Disadvantages: Where wire netting is used for subdividing feed crops, the tags are occasionally pulled out. Care has to be taken when shearing, or combs may be caught in the tag and broken. This does not occur if the left ear is used, as this is the ear handled by the shearer and he feels the tag.

SOUTHDOWN SHEEP

STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE FOR SOUTHDOWN SHEEP

INTRODUCTION

The role of the Southdown breed in New Zealand is to supply rams for mating with ewes of a number of breeds and crosses to produce lambs for local and overseas consumers. The progeny of Southdown rams grow rapidly and comply with the modern requirements within the meat industry at all weights.

The Southdown breed has contributed substantially to the export meat trade. New Zealand's reputation, as the major international trader in lamb, has been made through the use of the Southdown ram. The demand for the Southdown cross lamb is likely to remain high because of its size, muscle development and meat quality.

DESCRIPTION OF A SOUTHDOWN SHEEP

A Southdown sheep is uniquely different from any other breed. It is characterised by its body shape and size, wool type, head shape and face and leg colour.

The animal should move actively and boldly with its head held above the line of the back. The sheep should be alert as noted in its eyes, movement of its head and ears, its stance and its locomotion. The ram should be distinctly masculine in appearance and action and the ewe should be refined and distinctly feminine.

Head - The head should be moderately wide, with no sign of horn or dark poll, have a strong jaw with the incisor teeth meeting the dental pad correctly. The face covering should be such that at no time can the sheep be woolblind. The eyes should show alertness and the ears should be of medium thickness and size.

Forequarters - The forearms should be thick and meaty. The shoulders should be well set but with sufficient angle to allow free movement. The forelegs should not be set too wide apart nor the brisket carried forward prominently as these indicate waste. A thick, short neck should be avoided as should a long thin neck.

Back and Loin - The back should be long. The loin should be rounded and covered with an optimum amount of fat. By handling the loin and rack regions it should be possible to distinguish sheep with a well-developed "eye" of the chop.

Hindquarters - The hindquarters should be wide at a point midway between the tail and the hocks. Depth at the crutch is required only if it is due to muscling. The tail setting should be relatively high. The rump should not be too wide and flat as width and flatness across the rump indicate excessive fatness. The pinbones should be wide apart.

Size - The modern Southdown should be long, not too deep in the body, heavy in weight with well developed muscling and free from excess fat. Performance recording and selecting sires and replacement ewes for weight at weaning and later should encourage the genetic development of larger Southdowns with less fat.

Legs and Feet - The hind legs should be set well apart and the joints of the four legs should be free from defects. The feet preferably should be black in colour, and the pasterns well sprung. Short legs should be avoided as these sheep produce fatter carcasses than those with longer legs.

External Reproductive Organs - The testicles, sheath and penis of the ram should be well developed and free from defects. The testicles should not hang too low nor should they be held close to the body. The udder should be sufficiently large but not pendulous in the lactating ewe.

Fleece and Skin - The fleece should be dense and fine and of approximately 23-28 microns. Hairiness in the fleece should be avoided. The colour of the fibres of the face and legs should be light, mousey grey and there should not be any black spots or patches anywhere in the fleece or on the face, ears or legs. The skin should be pink in colour.

GENERAL COMMENT

The modern Southdown must produce meaty, lean, early maturing lambs when mated to a variety of breeds and crosses of ewes. The forequarters, back, loin and hindquarters should each be muscular and free from excessive fat. Excessive width or flatness across the topline, or too great a depth of body indicate an animal which is too fat.

The major emphasis in selecting and breeding Southdown sheep must be on meatiness or muscling, an absence of excessive fat in any part of the body and a concentration of producing high quality meat in the more desirable and expensive cut areas of the carcass.

18. With regard to members of the Council, the mode of their election shall be as follows:-

The Council shall, with the notice convening the Annual General Meeting to be held in that year, cause to be sent to every member in the North Island a list containing the names of the retiring members of the Council and such other names as may have been proposed for election of members resident in the North Island, such names to be printed in a form of voting paper to be approved by the Council. Such voting papers shall be filled out and returned to the Council by a date to be fixed by the Council and the Council shall appoint two scrutineers to inspect the votes and report in writing to the meeting the names of the requisite number of persons having the highest number of votes in each respective Island. Such persons shall then be declared by the chairman of the meeting, and shall be deemed members of the Council, after which the voting list shall be forthwith destroyed by the scrutineers. In the case of equality of votes, the names of the candidates who have an equal number of votes shall then be submitted to the meeting, and a second ballot shall be taken at the meeting. A member may propose the names of any number of members for election on the Council by submitting the same to the Secretary not less than two months before the Annual General Meeting. Names so submitted shall be included on the list printed on the voting paper.

20. The Council shall be deemed to be duly constituted and shall continue to possess all the powers hereinafter stated, notwithstanding any vacancies in its body, but such vacancies shall be filled up as soon as, in the judgement of the Council, possible and expedient, in the manner provided by the preceding paragraph.
